'The demand for cosmetic medical treatment is high,' says

Horst Bruggraber of Premium Health Solutions. The specialist, whose team for patients from abroad designs 'full-service packages' at private Austrian clinics, praises Austrian health providers. 'Austria is not cheap, but the quality of care makes up for it.' This is also why members of international elites travel to Vienna for cosmetic treatment. Patients from Russia, the Arab countries and Germany in particular recognise the value of the work of Austria's cosmetic and aesthetic surgeons. Bruggraber again: 'These are complicated procedures, where patients need to have absolute confidence in the surgeon's abilities.'

The competence and experience of a specialist in plastic surgery can be judged by the number and nature of operations they have performed, according to renowned plastic surgeon Wolfgang Metka, who attends to patients at his surgery in Vienna and at the Rudolfinerhaus private clinic. 'I have been performing aesthetic surgery for 25 years now, I specialise in every aspect of the field. At the same time, one gains most experience in procedures performed most frequently, and at my surgery these are breast and profile corrections, and facelifts.' Dr. Metka is especially pleased with the Rudolfinerhaus hospital that provides discreet and hotel-like accommodations. "I treat all of my patients from eastern Europe and Asia there. Much has been invested to create the best possible medical treatment and patient care in Austria, and this reputation is spreading to an international audience.
